Dear Professor Takalo,

Thank you for this and your previous email. I am afraid I am in continuous meetings all day; so I am dictating this over the phone.

First of all, I apologise for the delay in the publication of your paper, which has been due to a combination of administrative difficulties and my having had much more on my plate than I had expected. Still, we are now at the final production stage, with all the corrected proof material having been sent to the printer, and I expect to send you the copies of the GER issue and offprints of your paper in four weeks from today.

Please convey my sincere apologies also to your co-authors.

With best wishes,
Anthony Courakis.

Subject: Our submission to Greek Economic Review

Dear Editor Courakis,

After invitation and encouragement by professor Geoffrey Wood (to whom this email is copied) I withdrew my manuscript "R&D spillovers and information exchange: A case study", co-authored with Klaus Kultti and Tanja Tanayama, from another journal and submitted it to be considered for publication in Greek Economic Review at the end of September 2003. The submission occurred via professor Wood. He also informed us later, in February 2004, that the paper is accepted for publication. However, since I have not heard anything from the Journal itself, I would like to inquire the status of the submission. I would appreciate a prompt answer from the Journal, since Tanja, who is my and professor's Kultti's student, is now going to the job market.

Sincerely,
